LUCIA BORGONZONI, UNDERSECRETARY OF STATE AT THE ITALIAN MINISTRY OF CULTURE

“There are moments when cinema manages to convey more than words ever could. This is especially true when young people take up the camera; with their curious gaze, their freedom to imagine, and their desire to tell stories about the world, they offer narratives, emotions, and perspectives that can surprise us and reveal entirely new viewpoints. The inaugural International Student Film Festival, promoted by the Centro Sperimentale di Cinematografia, was born from this very spirit: to provide a space for meeting, exchange, and the promotion of emerging talent, while showcasing the creativity and richness of diverse cinematic cultures. It is an initiative that celebrates cinema not merely as an art form, but as a universal language: one capable of bringing together different people, cultures, and sensibilities.

In this endeavor, education and training play a fundamental role. Investing in the young men and women who choose to pursue a path in the world of cinema means securing the future of our cultural and creative industry; it means providing them with the tools, skills, and opportunities to transform an intuition into a finished work, and a passion into a profession. Yet, education goes beyond the simple transmission of technical knowledge: it involves cultivating a way of watching, nurturing curiosity, developing critical thinking, and encouraging the courage to experiment. The Ministry of Culture recognizes this as a core responsibility: supporting education, guiding young talent, and fostering an environment where culture and cinema can continue to serve as spaces for growth, innovation, and opportunity.

Promoting cinema means investing in the people who will shape it tomorrow, fostering professionalism, creative flair, and different perspectives. In light of this, the Centro Sperimentale di Cinematografia stands firm as a pillar of excellence for our nation: this institution has always operated as a permanent laboratory for experimental research and artistic avant-garde, while simultaneously fulfilling the crucial role of preserving, restoring, and revitalizing Italy’s immense audiovisual heritage.

The International Student Film Festival serves as a culmination to this mission; it projects and strengthens the institution’s international vocation, building a bridge between diverse experiences, artistic languages, and educational paths. This digital catalog captures and conveys the value of an initiative that I hope will become a permanent fixture, one capable of growing over time and consistently offering new opportunities to young filmmakers. Behind every film lie study, dedication, sensitivity, and, above all, a desire to share a story with others. It is vital that these young people find spaces where they can be heard, recognized, and encouraged to continue on their chosen paths. The future of cinema belongs to them; supporting their ideas and fostering their development means creating room for a new generation of perspectives, helping them take their first steps and providing a solid professional foundation for their creative dreams.”

GABRIELLA BUONTEMPO, PRESIDENT CENTRO SPERIMENTALE DI CINEMATOGRAFIA

“It is with deep emotion and great pride that I inaugurate the first edition of the CSC – International Student Film Festival. This initiative, promoted by the Centro Sperimentale di Cinematografia, was born with an ambitious and essential goal: to celebrate the future of cinema through the eyes and films of those who are currently laying the foundations for the audiovisual language of tomorrow. We are the first competitive festival organized by an European film school, and for this special occasion, we have had the honor of entrusting the artistic direction to Maestro Marco Bellocchio. His connection to the Centro - which welcomed him as a student in the 60s - serves as an ideal bridge between our prestigious history and the vitality of the new generations that now fill our classrooms, as well as of film schools across the globe. The response we received has been extraordinary: 1,683 short films from 101 different countries. From Afghanistan to Brazil, from Costa Rica to India, spanning Europe and the Middle East, the Festival has become a global mosaic of perspectives, cultures, and sensibilities. Our intention is for this event to serve, above all, as a fertile meeting ground where young directors, screenwriters, actors, and industry professionals can engage in dialogue, exchange ideas, and collectively shape the cinema of the future. From November 10th to the 15th, Rome will become the hub of this creative energy.

Screenings and panel discussions will be hosted at iconic cultural landmarks in the city: the Sala Pietro Germi (formerly Aula Magna) of the Centro Sperimentale di Cinematografia, the MAXXI (National Museum of 21st Century Arts), and the Cinema Farnese Arthouse. This will be more than just a showcase for the selected talent; it will be an opportunity for profound reflection on the state of the industry and the pathways for young talent to enter a professional landscape. The Festival is a project that firmly believes in cinema as a universal language of inclusion, innovation, and intercultural dialogue.

I would like to express my heartfelt thanks to our Artistic Director, the Selection Committee, the International Jury, and the partners who made this endeavor possible. I am also grateful to the Ministry of Culture for providing essential support for the realization of this project. To the young filmmakers who submitted their work, I say this: this festival belongs to you. It is a space for freedom and experimentation, where the short film becomes a tool for exploring new technological and narrative frontiers. I invite you to experience these coming days with the spirit of those who understand that, even as its form and medium evolve, cinema remains our most powerful way of telling stories about reality. Enjoy the films and have a wonderful festival, everyone.”

MARCO BELLOCCHIO, DIRECTOR AND ARTISTIC DIRECTOR OF THE INTERNATIONAL STUDENT FILM FESTIVAL

“The Centro Sperimentale di Cinematografia welcomed me as a student in the 1960s. I agreed to take part because the years I spent at the school on Via Tuscolana were fundamental to my career, a time for training, exchange, and discovery. This is precisely the spirit in which this festival was founded: to bring students together from film schools all over the world, creating a unique, unrepeatable experience that could prove decisive for a new generation of filmmakers.”
